HERE'S CENTER OF WAR THAT IS THREATENING ENTIRE EUROPE

EXACT CAUSE OF AUSTRO-SERB WAR

Austria had demanded of Serbia that the pan-Slavic movement in Bosnia be suppressed at once and that immediate punishment be meted out to those involved in the Belgrade plot against Archduke Franz Ferdinand, recently assassinated at Sarajevo.

Serbia was slow to act and Austria delivered an ultimatum, giving the Serbian government until 6 o'clock last Saturday evening in which to reply and accept the terms laid down by Emperor Franz Joseph's government.

The gist of the ultimatum was that Serbia should disclaim all responsibility for the plot; that Serbia should promise to do her best to capture and punish the conspirators and suppress the pan-Slavic activities of her subjects in Austria.

Serbia's reply was unsatisfactory, the Austrian foreign office announcing that Serbia so hedged its acceptance of the terms as to nullify the effect of the demand.

Following was the answer made by Serbia, in which the Serbian archy took exceptions and began preparations for war.

Serbia desires sincere and correct neighboring relations with the dual monarchy.

"Convinced of the necessity of maintaining such relations, the Serbian government will readily comply with all the demands of Austria-Hungary which will serve to suppress all criminal acts, manifestations and disorders in neighboring countries.

Because the Serbian government considers it its duty to fulfill the obvious duty of a civilized state the government will in all sincerity do everything possible to prove its intense desire for friendly relations with the dual monarchy."

GEN. MILES THINKS A GREAT WAR WILL AID PARLIAMENT OF REASON

Fitchburg, Mass., July 29.—Lieut. Gen. Nelson A. Miles, retired, is deeply interested in the European crisis. He said: "The last fierce and well destructive war was not desired by the countries engaged, but was the result of aggressions at least one of which was great powers. The last action of Austria is but the crowning act of what has been threatened for years. Serbia in military strength is no match for Austria, and her former allies are in no condition, even if they were disposed to aid her. Unless the great power intervene Serbia will be absorbed. Should the great powers be drawn into conflict, it will undoubtedly become one of the most serious of wars, and with the most expensive and destructive, and will demonstrate the wisdom of a parliament of reason and justice for the settlement of international controversies."

General Miles said that Serbia has about 300,000 men. While they are well equipped and well drilled, the country, having gone through two hard wars, is not financially equipped for another war. Austria, he said, has an army of about 700,000 men, and the equipment is equal to that of Serbia.

Had No Use for Water.

Robert Browning's father did not believe in drinking undiluted water.

Browning used to tell a story of his father's indignation when he once asked him for a glass of water. "Water, Robert!" he exclaimed. "For washing purposes, I believe, it is often employed, and for navigable canals I admit it to be indispensable, but for drinking, Robert, God never intended it."

"Everybody's doing it." Doing what? Reading the want ads.

CROWDS OF CHILDREN ENJOY PLAYGROUNDS

DIRECTORS REPORT INCREASED ATTENDANCE AT CITY'S PLAY SPOTS.

OLDER ONES COME TOO

Tennis Courts and Swimming Beach Are Especially Popular These Summer Days.

During the past five weeks the activities on the four playgrounds in this city have been progressing at a rapid pace and at the present time practically every child in the city is taking part in the various forms of amusement. Since the opening the number in attendance has been increasing with great strides.

which indicates the high quality of the playgrounds. The directors in keeping alive the children's interest in outdoor play and games. From the standpoint of attendance the Webster and Adams plots are in the lead with the other playgrounds close behind. During the evening the number that is present is even larger than during the afternoon. This is accounted for by the fact that the country people, grown men and women, are taking interest. Tennis as well as indoor baseball seem to be the hobbies of the young men and women.

Every morning swimming lessons are given at the roped area at Goose Island. Three mornings a week are devoted to the boys and the same number to the girls. With the repair of the tower which has been completed, the swimming beach has become the popular place for older children as well as the youngsters. Arrangements are now being made by Supervisor Walter Cox for the holding of a swimming meet during the last week of August for both boys and girls. The program will include races of various distances and diving for distance and form.

At the present time the interest of all playground coers is centered on the baseball league. The teams have improved the game thus far to be unusually strong and predictions are that the race will be exceedingly close with a possible extension of the schedule to decide the winner. The league will consist of four teams, each with two games won and none lost. Tomorrow afternoon the Washington and Webster playgrounds will meet to decide who will hold down the similar position in the percentage column.

As soon as the weather becomes cooler the children who attend the plots will be taken on hikes to the surrounding country. The children from the playgrounds will be taken in four groups and will be under the supervision of Mr. Cox.

The closing feature will be the holding of a monster field day at the Driving Park with entrants from all the playgrounds. A program will be arranged which will give every child a chance to compete for prizes. Races of all kinds will be run as well as the holding of tests of accuracy in throwing quoits. Tryouts for the best men will be held soon so that practice may begin in earnest for the meet.

GIRLS' BALL TEAMS IN EXCITING GAME

Young Ladies of Summer School Enjoy Picnic and Show Skill at National Pastime.

The summer training school girls enjoyed an outing yesterday afternoon at Crystal Springs. The membership of the school making the trip to the park in the steamer, leaving the pier at 3:30. The feature of the picnic was a baseball game between the girls who boarded at Mrs. Rohrer's and a picked team from the entire school. The game began at four o'clock and proved most exciting, judging from the score. The scoring house was carried off the long end of a five to four count.

This week is the last week of the summer school and the examinations began this afternoon. The girls, including Prof. Buell and Prof. Lowth, were present and the game which was played proved to be one which would go credit to professional players. The girls have made in mastering the rudiments of the national pastime is little short of remarkable. The game was won by the seventh inning after being a neck and neck contest throughout the opening innings.

The lineups were as follows: Batting house team—Capt. Miss Roberts, first base, Miss Nichols, Knudson, Cooper, Milbrant, Hanson, Roberts, McCauley and Cartwright. The all-school team was composed of the following members: Captain, Miss Gilman, players, Misses Olson, Gilman, Ancliam, Ward, Bates, Taylor, Butters, Sherman, Roberts.

Have a look at an up-to-date shaving parlor at the Smoke Shop. Opens tomorrow.

SEES BOYHOOD CHUM AFTER SIXTY YEARS

Levi Ellis, Residing Near Hanover, Visits Friends at Cedar Falls, Iowa, After Long Separation.

After a separation of over sixty years, during which time neither knew of the whereabouts of the other, Levi Ellis, who resides on a farm near Hanover, and George Tuttle, a well-to-do farmer of Cedar Falls, Iowa, who were boyhood chums and playmates at their home at Scranton, Pa., the two aged men held a reunion at the latter's home at Cedar Falls recently. Mr. Ellis returned a short time ago from his visit and declared that he counts the meeting of his old companion, after so many years as one of the most enjoyable moments of his life.

When the Pennsylvania home the two boys hunted wild cats and trapped rattlesnakes in the mountains, fished in the brooks and enjoyed the days of boyhood. Tuttle was the first to come west and located near Janesville and Afton in the early fifties. Fifty-nine years ago Mr. Ellis came west to settle in Rock County. Tuttle had some farther west to what place his friend never knew until correspondence with friends back east revealed the information to Ellis that Tuttle was still living at Cedar Rapids. He went to him at once, sent his photograph and the meeting was speedily arranged. Mr. Ellis is 74 years of age while his friend is 82 years. Both are enjoying the best of health. The never grew homesick for the east, said Mr. Tuttle in speaking of his recent visit, "and he has not been back since he came here. I have been back there about twenty times, for it was hard for me to break away from the home people."

SUES AUTO DRIVER FOR LOSS OF CREAM

Edward Waters of Afton Claims Beloit Man is Responsible for Loss of Spilt Cream.

Afton, July 29.—People in this village are interested in the outcome of the damage suit brought against William Kneibusch of Beloit, by Edward Waters, for speeding, one day last week. The suit is for the loss of a load of cream to the creamery when he met Mr. Kneibusch with a party in his car. Mr. Waters claims that the former was swerving at such high speed that his team of mules were frightened, throwing the wagon into the ditch just north of the bridge leading into the village from the south. The suit was set for Tuesday. Witnesses called from the village to testify were: William Kneibusch, Charles Griffen, Dan Ennis, James Holmes, James Searies and Edward Walters. Mr. and Mrs. August Noak have returned to Beloit from a vacation after a short visit with Mr. Noak's sister, Mrs. Ed Hammel and family. They were accompanied to their home by Miss Selma Hammel, who will make a Brinkman and Paul Johnson of Wilmette, Ill., were recent Afton visitors.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

EFFICIENT EATING.

"MEN dig their graves with their teeth," said Seneca some hundreds of years ago, and if anything it is truer now than it was in his day.

We sit at tables loaded with too much food, and while we eat far more than we need to support life, far more than our digestion can possibly take care of, we talk about the high cost of living and the next to impossibility of supporting life under present conditions.

Now be it emphatically understood that I am not one of those who say that being more economical is the way to solve the problem which is slightly increased wages have forced upon a large number of people. If we simply contented ourselves with living more economically and did not try to have things set right, that would mean that the buying power of wages would be pushed down still further, and we should be no better off than now.

My feeling about the matter is this. If we common folks can live more economically and at the same time more healthily, let's do it for our own sakes, and yet keep right on trying to have evils corrected, and to get everything that belongs to us. Then if we ever do get things straightened out, our habit of economical eating will mean that we will have just so much larger a margin for other purposes.

Of course you realize that by economical eating I do not mean scrimping or eating bad food. I mean efficient eating. "Efficiency" according to the dictionary means, "the ratio of useful work to energy expended." Efficiency in eating is the ratio of energy produced to the cost of food and the different kinds of work demand different foods.

In a family where there is plenty of money and to spare the noon lunch is always a simple soup, thin cut bread and a light dessert. The man of the house, although he could easily afford rich and elaborate food, feels that he can work much better on what his wife calls "his genius lunch."

A gentleman farmer's wife had to plan the meals for half a dozen hired men. The work was new to her and she gave them dainty salads and fancy and expensive foods from a high class grocer's. As she looks back over the career that ended in financial ruin, she says, "I thought I was doing them a favor, but I see now that what they needed and wanted was corned beef and cabbage. If I had realized that in the first place they would have done better work and I would have saved my money."

Foods must be selected not only with reference to their nutritive value, but with reference to those who are going to eat them. Many foods such as baked beans, corned beef and cabbage, etc., which the stomach of the manual worker can digest and convert into nutriment, the stomach of the brain worker cannot digest at all, and hence they poison rather than nourish him.

It is a big subject and one that every woman ought to study. Any librarian will help you find books dealing with this matter. In my home I have a simple chart which gives a list of the food elements contained by the various foods, tells me just what I need, and I should be glad to tell anyone who is interested where to get duplicates.

A visitor saw that chart on my table the other day. "All nonsense," she said, turning up her nose. That's one point of view. Here's hoping that my reader friends are too intelligent and too progressive to take it.

ham or bacon, with such individual finish of pickle or olives as the taste suggests.

Pumpernickel Sandwiches—Put a very thin slice of cold roast beef between two thin buttered slices of white bread. Boston brown bread cut not quite so thin may be used in the same way.

When it shall be said in any country in the world, "My poor are happy; neither ignorance nor distress is to be found among them; my jails are empty of prisoners, my streets of beggars; the aged are not in want, the taxes are not oppressive; the rational world is my friend, because I am a friend of its happiness"—when these things can be said, then may that country boast of its constitution and its government.—Thomas Paine.

SEASONABLE DISHES.

The spring vegetables are always palatable, but a change is most agreeable. Try some of these:

Green Peas and Curried Rice.—Pour over a little water on a pint of green peas, simmer gently until tender, add a teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of butter and a dash of pepper. Before the peas are put to cook, place a peeled and halved onion in three tablespoonfuls of butter, add a half cup of rice, one tablespoonful of curry powder, and stir these until the butter has been absorbed. Add three and a half cupfuls of broth, a teaspoonful each of sugar and salt, a tablespoonful of lemon juice and cook the rice until tender. Place the rice in a ring and put the peas in the center to serve.

Spanish Salad.—To a cupful of chopped celery add a half cupful of flaked salmon, one tomato, one green pepper and a bit of onion all chopped fine, season well with any dressing, and serve on lettuce leaves.

Red Raspberries and Currant Ice Cream.—Take a quart of red raspberries and a pint of white currants, rub them through a sieve, add a pint of sugar, and let stand a half hour, then add a quart of cream and freeze.

Syrup for Summer Use.—Strawberry Syrup—Crush ripe berries and strain the juice until clear, boil a pound of sugar with a cupful of water until it spins a thread, but do not stir, into this add two cupfuls of strawberry juice. Cook for 15 minutes, covered, then seal hot.

Raspberry Juice.—Boil together two cupfuls each of sugar and water, 15 minutes, then add two cupfuls of raspberry juice and simmer 20 minutes. Seal while hot.

Cherry Syrup.—Stone very ripe cherries and pound half the stones in a bag till all are crushed, mix these with the fruit and squeeze well in a bag until all the juice is extracted. To every quart add two cupfuls of sugar, boil ten minutes, skimming well, when cool bottle and seal.

Peggy & Company

It Develops That Peggy Has a Regrettable Strain of Snobishness.

Had Peggy been able to match her blue voile at Elder's her return home would not have been delayed. Had she returned home earlier in the afternoon she would not have been caught in the rain. And it was all her fault that she stepped into the entrance of the Williams building for shelter and there ran plump into—but we anticipate.

She wasn't able to find what she wanted at Elder's, so she must needs dash breathlessly from store to store to find the proper shade. Every possible one of blue was to be had save the right one, and then at about four a brisk and steady rain surprised Peggy without an umbrella.

All of which, you may be sure, did not in any way mellow the fretful mood in which Peggy had started her afternoon's shopping. The whole seemed an ingenious plot to arouse in her as many shades of peevishness and petulance as she had seen that afternoon of blue voile. She was as then, say at the sewing circle, utterly distraught.

And then upon skipping hastily to shelter she chanced upon Tom with Mildred, as all but related in the first paragraph.

Tom's regard for Mildred Dietrich has, at one time or another, been a source of displeasure to Peggy. It has the approval of father and mother and indeed of everyone—including Miss Dietrich—save Peggy. Peggy and Tom have never discussed it openly, but there has always been that feeling between them.

Peggy objects to Miss Dietrich because—well—she works.

The brother of a sister has a fair opportunity of studying and meditating the feminine psychology. Tom has found some amusement in its pursuit at times and again it raps him unspeakably. The attitude Peggy has shown upon the mention of Mildred Dietrich has affected him with a deep sense of lassitude. Or in his own words, it has made him good and weary.

But today. With the one umbrella they have managed to discover, Tom and Mildred are prepared to start home when Peggy comes upon them. She is cheerily invited to crawl under its shelter. But she seems to prefer her air of hauteur. She says something about catching a car in a moment. Miss Dietrich not quite understanding, is concerned for Peggy and would pause to urge further. But Tom thinks it best to hurry away with Miss Dietrich and settle with Peggy later.

Heart and Home Problems

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl thirteen years of age.

(1) In making rose beads must the petals be fresh or dried? Please publish a recipe for making them.

(2) What is the best way to make a girl in the eighth grade. Am I far enough advanced?

(3) What is good for dandruff? (4) Is it all right to wear a sweater when you are going out of town if you haven't a coat? FERN.

Rose Beads.—For one long string use four quarts fresh rose petals, one-half teaspoon tincture of iron and one-half teaspoon liquid glue or mucilage. Grind the leaves through meat chopper till very fine. Mix all the ingredients well together, then roll in marbles the size of a pea. Lay them on a soft cushion for three hours, then put a large pin through center and stick pin in a box covered until dry.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) What do you think a young man's intentions are if he tells you that he loves you? Would you consider that as a proposal of marriage?

(2) If a young man calls on you twice a week, do you think he should ask you for "steady company"?

(3) How can I reduce my weight without using harmful drugs?

(4) Once upon a time I would have been considered a proposal of marriage when a man told a woman he loved her. But these days men have quite a habit of telling a number of girls the same thing and one can't be sure of a proposal unless the man actually speaks of marriage. Then the engagement should be announced, at least to the girl's parents.

(5) Not necessarily. He may like the girl, but not want to be tied to her with any understanding. Anyway, "steady company" is not being engaged. Why can't you enjoy each other as a company without any string tied to it?

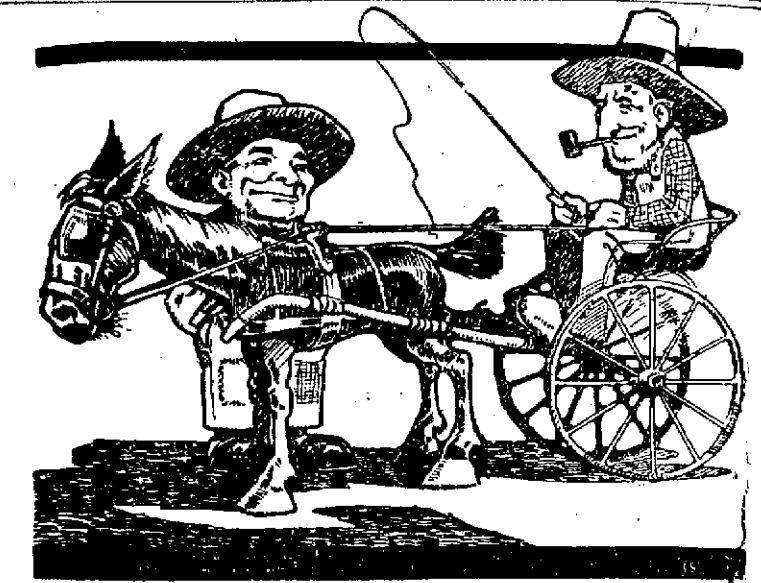

(6) Diet is the only safe way, and even that isn't safe if you don't eat enough to keep up your strength. Eat plain, rich soups, gravies, pastries, etc. Exercise until you perspire freely, then rub down with alcohol, if possible. Guard against taking cold.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: How can I make my face full? I am very thin and my face is so thin it makes me look bad.

READER: You will need to add flesh all over your body to make your face plumper. Eat plenty of nourishing food, drink lots of good milk, sleep at least nine hours every night and longer if you feel like it; don't worry about anything but outdoors all you can, take no violent exercise and make up your mind to be happy and contented. You ought to flesh up under that regime.

For the Sake of Shopping. A few women get so much fun out of shopping that they really hope the articles they really buy won't last as long as the clerk promises, so that they can the sooner repeat the experience.

And She Needed Checks. Teacher—"Did you ask your mamma why the pen was mightier than the sword?" Small Eloise—"Yes, ma'am. She said it was because papa couldn't sign checks with a sword."

What do you ask for the horse? I'll sell him for just what he cost me. I paid one-half as much for him as you did for the team you sold at one-third loss. I understand that you put you back $50.00. How much does he ask for the horse?

FOR HOW LONG?

Janesville Raises a Pertinent Question.

When a neighbor tells us that he has recovered from a serious illness, the first question that naturally arises is, "How long will he keep well?" Temporary relief is one thing, but a lasting cure is altogether different. There is nothing temporary about the work of Doan's Kidney Pills as the following Janesville evidence proves beyond a doubt.

Mrs. Mohns, 310 N. Academy St., Janesville, says: "I was suffering from an attack of kidney trouble, went to the People's Drug Co. and got a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills. One or two boxes cured the ailment. Others of my family have used Doan's Kidney Pills with very satisfactory results."

A Lasting Cure. On July 2, 1913, Mrs. Mohns said: "I haven't had any trouble from my kidneys since Doan's Kidney Pills cured me several years ago. I willingly give you permission to continue publishing my former statement."

ALONE IN THE WILDERNESS

By JOSEPH KNOWLES

Copyright, 1913, by Small, Maynard & Co.

We were still three miles from the nearest house, and it was growing colder every minute.

Then, all of a sudden, I discovered just in time an opening bridge ahead of us, over which the horse could not possibly cross. It certainly seemed as if fate were blocking me at every point.

As I stood there I heard away in the distance the sound of a train coming. In the night the engineers and firemen of these trains do not look out of the cab windows, because they do not expect to see anything on the track in winter. I tried to lead the horse off the track, but he would not budge an inch. I saw that something had to be done at once. I grabbed the girl, dragged her off the horse's back and laid her down beside the track.

Walking along beside the horse during the last hour had given some of my strength back, and when the animal would not move a second time I began to push him with my shoulder. The train was quite near now, and in my frantic efforts to get the horse off the rails I reached down and grabbed his right foot and threw my whole strength against him. Down he went with a crash beside the track, and I held him down by the head so he could not get up.

How I wanted that train to stop just then! I began to shout. As the train came nearer my yells were lost in the roar of the engine.

It slid past us, and no one knew we were within a thousand miles.

It was useless to attempt to cross that bridge—in fact, it could not be done. I left the horse and started and the horse into the stable," I gasped. "Bandage up his legs and stop the blood. Don't ask me any questions. I'll tell you later."

The girl was quickly taken into the house. I felt relieved. My job was done. I relaxed.

The man began to ask questions. "Don't ask me anything. Leave me alone for an hour," I begged. I did not want them to touch me at all.

"Won't you have a glass of elder?" the man asked quietly.

I didn't answer, but he disappeared and came back shortly with a dipperful of the sour stuff. It was a big two quart dipper, and it was full. I grabbed it from his hand and drained it to the last drop. The dipper fell from my hands to the floor, and I sank down in front of the fire.

We had reached that house after seven hours of torture and cold.

While the girl had frozen the side of her face, one hand and the sides of her feet, she recovered. She was covered with black and blue places where I had beaten her and dragged her about. The horse came through all right.

With the exception of a badly cut up pair of legs I was as well as if nothing had happened the next morning.

When I entered the wilderness on Aug. 4, 1913, I placed entire dependence upon my knowledge of the woods, which I had gained from practical experience. In the preliminary catechizing of myself I could think of nothing that would block me in the undertaking.

I had never read any books on the primitive man or the primitive life. I simply knew what I had been forced to do in the past, and I felt that such knowledge would carry me through, as proved to be the case.

A knowledge of woodcraft can never be gained through the reading of books. While certain methods can be described in this manner, the reader will never grasp the true spirit of the subject unless he has the practical experience to go with it. A little of this practical experience goes a long way.

If a man is really interested, his year by year contact with the woods will aggregate a considerable amount of knowledge. While he is in the forest a man is not making a study of nature through the medium of type set pages, but he is gradually absorbing the real fundamentals through the great big open book of nature—the one out another tree, and when he reaches it makes another blaze there. On he goes through the forest, making a spot here and there in this manner.

Even the amateur can easily follow a blazed trail. When he comes to a spotted tree all he has to do is to look ahead to the right or left until he sees another blazed tree. Upon reaching that he goes through the same performance. Thus he goes from tree to tree all the way along the trail.

To return to the natural game trails. These trails are worn through the process of one animal after another drifting along over the same ground. They use the same route through the forest because that is the easiest way to go. The woods are full of these trails.

CHAPTER XII. Trapping and Woodcraft.

MARKS in snow tell the trapper that an animal has passed, but his knowledge, gained from experience, allows him a more complete understanding, and by it he can interpret the disturbances all along the trail.

By observing the lay of the land the experienced trapper who comes upon undergrowth and ferns understands why the path is zigzagged.

He is able to tell what kind of an animal is ahead of him by the size of the tracks and by the distance between the steps.

By studying the shrubbery the trapper can determine what the animal has eaten, and if he knows what the various animals feed upon it will be easy for him to tell just what sort of creature has preceded him without seeing it at all.

There is always some sign along the trail, and the experienced man can never go wrong. Marks of antlers on the bark of trees point out the direction a deer or moose has taken.

The man who knows the woods is always at home in the forest. He always knows north from south without the aid of a compass. He is sure of himself in regard to direction, knowing that moss always grows on the north side of trees.

The woodsman also knows what the situation of the sun means. If he is forced to travel any distance on rainy days the moss acts as his compass. The moss was the only compass I had during my sixty mile tramp through the wilderness to Canada.

If a man is traveling through the forest a number of miles to a certain point and he is acquainted with the woods and wild life he does not always travel in a perfectly straight line. He allows himself to drift along the trails of least resistance, keeping in his mind all the while the point of the compass he is headed for.

For instance, if he strikes a trail that bears to the northeast and his destination is directly north he can follow this trail to the northeast for miles, which goes partly in the direction he is aiming for. Doing this, he is always on the lookout for the next trail along the line of least resistance bearing straight north or even northwest. If it is a northwest trail that turns up he knows by following it along for some distance that he has brought himself back to his course or even crossed it to the westward of north. Consequently he knows that north is still to the east of him. Of course under such circumstances he watches for trails as he walks along which lead to the east or north of the trail that he is following.

Thus by zigzagging through the forest on the natural trails of the least resistance he finally reaches the point he started for.

In a country with which a man is fairly well acquainted there is no difficulty in finding water at any time. Even at the time you need water you are unconsciously walking along a natural game trail that leads to water. It isn't necessary to go in a straight course over the tops and underbrush and through the tangles to find water.

Simply follow the natural game trails.

In the forest, from the smallest to the larger ones, and such a course will always lead you to water or a camp. Perhaps the questions may arise: Why do these big trails lead you to water? And why do the trails get bigger? Because these trails always lead to something, and the constant frequenting of them by animals makes them bigger. They lead the animals to something, or there wouldn't be any big trail there.

Anything that is good for the animal is good for the human being. In a word, all a man has got to do in the wilderness is to live in perfect harmony with his surroundings. He hasn't got to resist anything.

It isn't necessary to walk into a stream and wade up against the current. Build a crude craft and float downstream with the current. You will get a whole lot more out of it.

In building a fire always kindle it to the lee of your lean-to, so that the smoke of the fire won't pour into your camp and smother you.

I would pick the site of a camp in the open, under the shelter of spruce or cedar, or some other black growth timber. This is perfect shelter, for all the dew or frost that would fall during the night would land on the limbs of trees.

On the spalls under the trees it is always dry, no matter how damp or frosty it may be outside. This black growth timber protects the ground beneath it from frost, fog, and dampness which come from the atmosphere. The black timber absorbs all this as nourishment for itself. This explains why under black growth timber there is never any sign of vegetation and spalls that have fallen the year before.

There is not a thing in the forest, dead or alive, but what is of some use. Even the dead leaves are invaluable. They can be used to kindle fires and also to make a fine top covering for a forest bed.

The trapping season in the woods starts early in the fall when fur is getting good and prime. The trappers have what they call trapping lines, a territory extending for miles through the country. This trapping line section is "bailed up"—that is to say, food liked by the animals is scattered about through the district in order to get the fox, mink, otter, sable, bear, muskrat and beaver coming there.

Then the setting of the traps begins. The trapper does not work according to the eight hour day schedule. Sometimes he is up and away at 4 o'clock in the morning and continues working until after dark at night.

After the catch the skins are skinned and stretched and dried in camp. Without tanning they are sent direct to market.

Any one who devotes his whole time to trapping and understands his business can make as much as $3,000 a year. A five dollar license at present allows any resident of the state of Maine to catch all fur bearing animals in any place in the state during the respective open seasons.

Dinner Stories

In the happy past John Henry was madly in love with Gladys May, but there came one of those silly little quarrels, and the fair one told the youth to leave her papa's porch.

John Henry did so. Moreover, he kept on going, and it was something like ten years before he returned to the native haunts he knew so well.

At a ball one night he met the beautiful Gladys May, married now, and it was with matronly condescension that she elected to look upon him.

"After ten long years we meet again, Gladys," said John Henry, eagerly stepping forward to take her hand. "I trust that you still remember me."

"Let me see," mused the fair Gladys May, with an indifferent expression. "Was it you or your brother who used to be an old sweetheart of mine?"

"Really, I don't know," came back the cruel response of John Henry, "Probably it was my father."

"So she has quarreled with that ugly beast of hers! He is the ugliest man I have ever seen. What did they quarrel about?"

"She thought she would make him feel good, and remarked that handsome men were never worth enough powder to blow them over the fence."

"And it didn't have the desired effect?"

"No, it made him furiously angry."

So many people suffer from weak, inactive sluggish kidneys, and don't know what ails them. All tired out and miserable—run down and nervous—sleep poorly and no appetite—pain in back and sides—swollen ankles and joints—bladder weaknesses—that's kidney trouble. You need the medicine that stops the cause of your trouble. That's exactly what FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS do. They are tonic and strengthening, build up your kidneys, reduce swellings, make you feel fit, active and energetic again. They are a wonder to those using them. Try them yourself. Contain no habit forming drugs. Do not accept a substitute.

HAVE LARGE FIELD FOR TRAP TOURNAMENT

Seventy Shooters Expected to Compete in Janesville Trap Tournament Tomorrow.

Between sixty and seventy gunners are expected to compete in the annual tournament of the Janesville Gun Club, which will be held tomorrow at the club's grounds on North Washington street. Crack trap shots from all sections of the state and even from Chicago, have paid entrance fees and the shoot tomorrow, weather permitting, will have the largest field in the experience of the club.

Two traps have been put into service and the tourney will start at nine-thirty o'clock and will continue until the ten events of fifty targets are run off. One hundred and fifty targets will comprise the day's events, the winners to share in the division of the purse money. Both the professional and amateur classes will be represented by state and nationally famed cracksmen and a large gallery is expected to witness the tournament.

In the professional class George Maxwell, the one armed marksman from Hastings, Nebraska, who averages 56 per cent, is entered, as well as powder and gun companies' exhibition men. Among the amateurs entered are Captain Jack Wolfe and Sumner of Milwaukee. Shooters are also expected from Chicago, Madison, Milwaukee and near-by cities.

To the public is extended a cordial invitation to witness the tournament, which will probably be the best held this year in southern Wisconsin.

HELPS DAD PLAY SOME CLEVER GOLF

Perhaps Kraft has enjoyed his pleasant experience of awakening, like Byron, to find himself famous. It all happened in a day and within that short space of time his name was on every lip in the country. Many and many a newspaper column told all about him. How many of them mentioned that in the last game he had taken part in with Newark against Baltimore he got a homer with the bases packed? That alone, however, would never win him the public notice that was his.

It is observed that Christy Mathewson is no longer sticking to his hunch of perfect control at all times. For a long while it was the big Six's policy to put the ball in the groove on every occasion and for a long while did he abide by it. But of late it is noticed that he has changed the scheme. Every once in a while he slips in a wild one, sometimes beating a player or chasing him back from the plate.

DECLINE IN DEATHS FROM TYPHOID FEVER

IS NOTICEABLE FACT IN QUARTERLY REPORT OF STATE BOARD OF HEALTH.

AVERAGE RATE HOLDS

Mortality Rate of 11.7 Per Thousand for Period is Not Higher Than Average for Five Years.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Madison, Wis., July 29.—A marked decline in the number of deaths reported from typhoid fever as compared with 1913 is one of the features in the quarterly report of the state board of health issued today. During the months of April, May and June, 1914, 7,129 deaths were reported by the various local health registrars throughout the state. This corresponds to an annual death rate of 11.7 per 1,000 estimated population. Comparing this rate with the rate of 11.4 per 1,000 for 1908, 12.2 per 1,000 for 1909, 11.4 per 1,000 for 1910, 11.7 per 1,000 for 1911, 11.8 per 1,000 for 1912 and the rate of 11.9 for 1913, it is evident that the rate for the past three months is not higher than the average for the preceding five years, which compares favorably with the usual mortality rate in Wisconsin at this season of the year.

Tuberculosis on Gains.
There is practically no increase in the number of deaths from the various communicable diseases with the exception of pulmonary tuberculosis, diphtheria, scarlet fever and pneumonia, says State Health Officer C. A. Harper. The increase in each case is only slight and does not represent any unusual prevalence of the diseases. The very marked decline in the number of deaths reported from typhoid fever as compared with 1913 is deserving of special mention. We hope that the time is near at hand when this easily preventable disease will be unknown in this state. Comparing the total deaths reported for the second quarter of 1914 with a similar report for 1913, it is shown that there is a decrease of 87 in the number of deaths reported for the months of April, May and June, 1914. Considering the deaths reported by age groupings, the statistics show that there is a decline of 52 in the number of deaths among children under one year of age, but an increase of 24 in the age groupings from one to four years and an increase of 35 in the number of deaths among persons 65 years of age and over as compared with the mortality for 1913.

Infant Mortality Rate.
The fact that there is an annual decline in the number of deaths reported among children under one year of age is a good indication that the educational campaign for the proper care of infants and young children has been productive of much good. Dr. Harper says that during the considerable part of the three months covered by the report Wisconsin weather was unusually warm and "we might expect a considerable increase in the number of deaths among young children, especially among children under one year of age."

The important causes of deaths from each disease with the number reported are as follows: Pulmonary tuberculosis, 602; other tuberculosis, 89; typhoid fever, 29; diphtheria, 69; scarlet fever, 79; measles, 33; whooping cough, 18; pneumonia, 708; diarrhea, enteritis under two years, 109; meningitis, 105; influenza, 22; puerperal septicemia, 20; cancer, 429; violence, 431, and still-births 420.

Comparing the number of deaths from certain diseases for the months of April, May and June, 1914, with a similar report for 1913, there is a decrease in the number of deaths as follows: Other forms of tuberculosis, 58; typhoid fever, 24; whooping cough, 17; meningitis, 24; influenza, 22; puerperal septicemia, 11; cancer, 3; and violence, 42. There is an increase in the number of deaths from the following diseases: Pulmonary tuberculosis, 57; pneumonia, 67; scarlet fever, 22; and pneumonia, 67.

Deaths From Violence.
The northern section of the state has a death rate for this period of 10.4 per 1,000 estimated population, while the rate for the central section is 12 and the rate for the southern section is 12.08. Considering the deaths from violence, 73 resulted from accidental drownings; 81 from suicides; 45 from railroad accidents; 22 from accidental scalds and burns; 24 from accidental falls; 19 from accidental gunshot wounds; 10 from homicides; 7 from lightning; 8 from horse vehicles and horses and 4 from street car accidents.

There were three deaths from infantile paralysis, two from ague, one from tetanus and four from heat prostrations. The deaths from infantile paralysis are distributed by county as follows: Eau Claire, 1; La Crosse, 1; and Jackson, 1.

CAPE COD WATERWAY OPENED TO TRAFFIC

New Route by Which Dangerous Massachusetts Passage is Avoided, is Now Ready.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Buzzards Bay, Mass., July 29.—The Boston, Cape Cod and New York Canal, connecting Buzzards Bay with Massachusetts Bay and enabling coastwise vessels to avoid the dangerous passage around wreck strewn Cape Cod, was formally opened today by August Belmont, of New York, president of the constructing and operating company. The canal shortens by seventy miles the shipping distance between the ports to the north and the south of it.

Although the canal has actually been open from one end to the other since early this month, no vessels other than those belonging to the owners of the canal have been allowed to pass through it. The canal will be open to traffic tomorrow and will be completed in all its details about the first of October.

Accommodates Big Vessels.
The Cape Cod Canal is thirteen miles long, including a cut through sand and boulders from Buzzards Bay to Sandwich, Mass. It has a bottom 100 feet in width, shelving out to 300 and 400 feet at the passing points, and has a draught of 25 feet at low tide. Greater in its dimensions than the Suez Canal, as originally constructed, it can accommodate the largest coastwise vessels afloat, with one or two exceptions.

At the eastern end is a massive breakwater 3,000 feet long, which contains more than 350,000 tons of granite. This is designed to protect vessels using the canal from the storms that sweep across Cape Cod Bay.

The 12,000,000 which has been expended in the constructing of the canal has been spent largely in excavating some 7,000,000 cubic feet of sand and boulders. In order to keep the wash from passing vessels from wearing away the banks, they have been rip-rapped, or paved with granite blocks and small boulders. This rip-rapping, a large portion of which was done by hand, runs from six feet to four feet above the high water mark. At the eastern end much money has been spent in the building of a sand-catcher, a device calculated to keep moving sand from choking up the mouth.

A River in Reality.
The canal is in reality a river, making all of Cape Cod an island, for there is considerable difference between the tides in Massachusetts Bay and Buzzards Bay, causing a sluggish current.

The canal is destined to play an important part in the future commerce along the Atlantic coast of North America. At the present time more than 25,000,000 tons of freight are transported over the Cape Cod route annually, including coal, 12,000,000 tons; stone, 300,000 tons; Nova Scotia plaster, 350,000 tons; Rockland-Rockport lime, 110,000 tons; cement, 50,000 tons; oil, 210 tons; ice, 300,000 tons; lumber, 2,000,000 tons and sand, 60,000 tons, while regular steamship lines of the higher class carry as cargo 2,000,000 tons of freight around the cape every year.

An absence of fog along the course of the canal will make it particularly desirable to both freight and passenger carrying vessels. Because of the heavy fogs that prevail off the cape at all times of the year many freighters and barges are forced to lay to until the weather is more favorable for a passage.

Indicates Heavy Traffic.
It is estimated that 500,000 persons a year are carried around Cape Cod. In the past sixty years, it is said, two thousand vessels of various kinds have been wrecked while attempting the passage and between seven and eight hundred lives have been lost.

Tolls for vessels passing through the canal will average in the neighborhood of seven cents per cargo ton per passage and for vessels without cargo, over 300 tons gross register, the rate will be about five cents per ton. Motorboats, yachts and other vessels not engaged in commercial trade may pass through the canal for as little as $3. The tolls depend upon gross tonnage and length overall.

USE GOOD ENGLISH

Use Good English. No Matter How Old You Are, It Is Not Too Late to Begin.

(This is Lesson VI in a series of short, simple lessons in English, by C. R. Rounds, Inspector of English, Wisconsin State Normal Schools.)

LAY SET RAISE

The three verbs, lay, set, and raise, cause a great deal of trouble by coming into our speech when they are not wanted. They are transitive verbs; that is, they take effect on some object. They are correctly used in the following sentences: Lay your work aside. Lay your wraps on the bed. Set the glasses on the tray. Set the dishes on the shelf. Raise your arms slowly. Raise your head a trifle. Notice that in each case someone is asked to lay something down, to set something aside, to raise something up. These verbs should never be used in the present tense without this something, which they are to act upon. It is WRONG to say Lay down. Hover. I sometimes tell my students that dogs and roosters don't lay. Dogs lie down, and roosters sit on the fence.

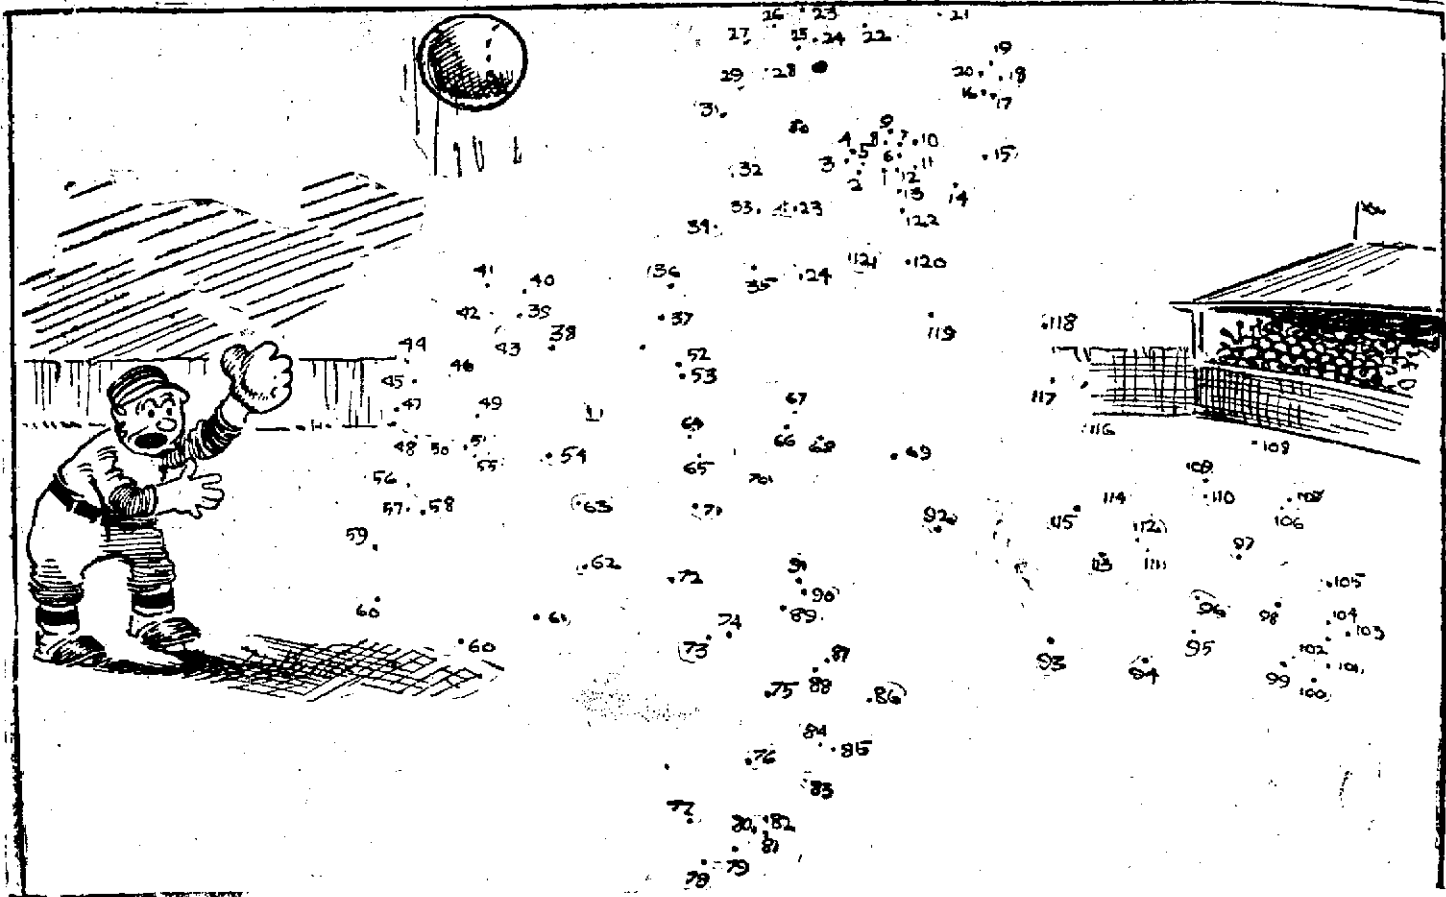

Keep lay, set and raise, and their past tenses—laid, set and raised—out of your speech until you need them; and remember: You need them very seldom. It is only when you want to speak of setting something, laying something, or raising something that you need these verbs.

(There is a very troublesome point in the use of lay, which we shall take up in our next lesson; but at this time, keep these forms in mind: Lay your books aside. He laid his coat on top of mine. He laid his head on the pillow. He set the table. He always sets the table for his mother. He raised a good crop of wheat.
